Dear Bryce

We acknowledge receipt of your letter dated 15th August 2019, that the use of chemicals including SOPP should be discontinued with immediate effect.

Please note the chemical SOPP is only administered prior to delivery and we confirm that this process has been discontinued on your pallets!!

We however would like to emphasise that timber that is only heat treated would be susceptible to fungus as heat treated timber can still have a moisture content in excess of 25%. Due to this, timber will develop fungus, particularly when containerised and sent over the equator. We will unfortunately then not be able to guarantee against fungus. To attempt to avoid fungus, only kiln dried timber should be used, which is dried to a moisture content of between 12-14%. This would alleviate most of the fungus problem, however there is still the possibility of fungus development. It would also increase the price considerably.

Trusting this meets with your requirements.

We remain

Yours Sincerely

Brian Thorpe
